My dear Wife

Mr Douglass will tell you how we came across B. Walnut the same day in which we set off from Cambridge The roads were excellent & though the streams were high: so that we were obliged to come by the way of Wotton It brought to my remembrance many scenes of a peculiar interest when I entered the B. Walnut room of our, or what was once our house. In that room I saw one at death's door by my nurseries. In that room Mary was born. —

after dinner I came to this place & found all well.

They began to print the Book on Saturday and got on a little: I borrowed of the City a State Paper to print about 3000 copies

In the afternoon Mr Preston went to Worthington to hold Church on Sunday and I went to see Mrs Barker Mrs Neale & Mrs Mcbouell. The two latter very seriously disposed towards Religion.

In the evening Col now Brigadier General King came to see me and spent several hours. He seems quite an altered man.

To day Sunday I have preached twice congregation quite full Baptized Mr Fay's little youngest son in the afternoon and gave notice of Confirmation. Next Thursday - I think I shall be in Chelthorpe next Sunday & leave my officiating in Worthington till my return. I drank tea with Mrs Broadrick and spent the evening with Cyrus.

I should have informed you that I am indebted for excellent lodgings to our good friend Judge Baithorne, where I am now writing this in one of the buildings erected by Dr Goodall on the same block with his former house.

Mrs Baithorne is well and has three pretty children. The Judge is occupied all the time with reporting for the house.

So give my best love to Mrs. Phipps & Sarah and hope the children all round me their loving Father
